ROYAL LEGISLATIVE DECREE 1/2010, OF 2 JULY, APPROVING THE CONSOLIDATED TEXT OF THE CORPORATE ENTERPRISES ACT

Official State Journal (BOE) No. 161, 3 July 2010

Fe de errata: Official State Journal (BOE) No. 210, 30 August 2010

PREAMBLE

I

This royal legislative decree stems from the authorisation set out in the seventh final provision of Act 3/2009 of 3 April on structural changes in companies, enabling the Government to proceed, within twelve months, to consolidate the legislation listed in that provision in a single text, under the title “Ley de Sociedades de Capital” (Corporate Enterprises Act). This marks the end of the traditional separate regulation of the forms or types of corporate bodies designated by that generic term, which now, with its inclusion in the title of the act, attains definitional status. The division of the legal provisions for joint stock (“sociedades anónimas”) and limited liability (“sociedades de responsabilidad limitada”) companies into two distinct laws was less a result of any intention to legislate outside the Commercial Code than of the length of the regulations. Indeed, the volume of these legal systems ruled out their inclusion in the 1885 Commercial Code, which contained only a few articles on joint stock companies and none at all on limited liability companies, which did not exist at that time. That explains why the Acts of 1951 and 1953 (the first of which exhibited considerable technical perfection for the time when it was enacted) were enacted as separate legal texts, and this separation has remained a feature of Spanish corporate legislation ever since. Instead of regulating all types of corporate enterprises in a single act, lawmakers have addressed their regulation successively and independently.

This duality or even plurality of “containers” (Act 19/1989 of 25 July, provided that the new regulations on limited partnerships were to be included in the Code, while Act 26/2003 of 17 July added a new title, Title X, to the Securities Exchange Act (“Ley del Mercado de Valores”), on listed joint stock companies) would not have raised any material problems if the “contents” had been sufficiently well coordinated. Although lawmakers have sought to achieve such coordination, either by (not always accurate) regulatory repetition or by resorting to cross-references, the result has not been fully satisfactory. The major reforms implemented at the end of the last century (aforementioned Act 19/1989 of 25 July and Act 2/1995 of 23 March) failed to eliminate all the instances of such lack of coordination, imperfections or loopholes, for which doctrine and case law have put forward legal solutions whose divergence is unwarranted.

Hence Spanish Parliament deemed it necessary to instruct the Government to consolidate the legislation governing corporate enterprises, bringing together in a single text the contents of the two aforementioned acts, as well, importantly, as the part of the Securities Exchange Act that regulates the most purely corporate-related aspects of joint stock companies whose securities are traded on an official secondary market. The consolidated text also includes the articles of the Commercial Code that address limited partnerships, a derivative corporate device that is barely used in practice. A single body of law must contain all the general regulations governing corporate enterprises, the only exception being as derived from the act on structural changes per se (where adjustment to enhance suitability was constrained), whose contents, referring to all types of companies, including “associations of persons”, could not be included in the consolidated text without generating inconsistencies. This task is extraordinarily important, insofar as the vast majority of the companies founded and operating in Spain are either limited liability or joint stock companies; yet it is also a task that poses a fair number of difficulties.

II

Parliament defined both the method for and the scope of the task entrusted to the Executive: the sole legal text ensuing from the exercise was to be the result of the regularisation, clarification and harmonisation of the many legal texts mentioned above. The new version was not to be a mere juxtaposition of articles, but would entail assuming the complexity involved in achieving the aforementioned threefold objective that underlies the respective legal decision, adopted in the public interest. In drafting the consolidated text, the Government has not limited its action to reproducing the legislation that had to be consolidated, but instead has had to engage in intricate redrafting to scrupulously perform the task entrusted to it.

To regularise means to adjust, regulate or arrange in an orderly manner. In some instances, the attainment of such regularisation called for modifying certain systematic features, while at the same time endeavouring to mitigate the imperfections of the regulatory provisions. Naturally, the consolidated text contains the texts consolidated in their entirety. None of the parts that time may have rendered obsolete has been removed; nor have the solutions arbitrated by law been modified, even where practice has questioned their efficiency or the cost of their implementation; nor does the act include rules that have not yet been enacted into law, anticipating foreseeable solutions. Yet if a consolidated text were published without such imperative regularisation, it would betray the terms of the instructions to ensure the aptness of the new text.

Together with regularisation, ensuring suitability or aptness calls for clarifying, i.e., as far as possible, removing any doubts of interpretation raised by the legal texts, and determining the exact scope of the regulations. On the odd occasion, the very routine used leads to this result; more often than not, however, the wording of provisions needs to be clarified by removing phrases that hinder comprehension, modifying poorly constructed formulas or adding elements that are essential to make it intelligible. Rather than reforming the legal texts, then, the consolidation elucidates the meaning of their provisions, perfecting the whole with no need to replace any of its parts.

In a word, the harmonisation mandate entails removing inconsistencies in legal terms, unifying and updating the terminology and, above all, doing away with the discrepancies derived from the previous legislative process. In this respect, the consolidated text has, to a very significant extent, generalised or extended regulatory solutions originally established for only one type of corporate enterprise, avoiding not only cross-references, but also having to resort to reasoning in pursuit of identical intention. Harmonisation was particularly necessary in connection with determining the powers of the annual general meeting and, above all, the dissolution and liquidation of corporate enterprises, because the fairly outdated chapter IX of the Spanish Joint Stock Companies Act (“Ley de sociedades anónimas”) contrasted with the far more modern chapter X of the Limited Liability Companies Act (“Ley de sociedades de responsabilidad limitada”), which was taken as the basis for the consolidated version.

III

That threefold criterion can lead to positive results in a legislative system such as Spain’s in which limited liability companies (the device clearly preferred by the business community) have traditionally been conceived more as simplified and flexible joint stock companies than as partnerships in which the shareholders enjoy the benefit of liability protection from the debts incurred in the company’s name. In Spain, limited liability companies are not a joint stock company “on the outside” and a partnership “on the inside”. Despite the syncretism of the legal system governing limited liability companies, which combines elements from very different legislative models, the predominant feature of the system is that these organisations are bound by the framework common to all corporate enterprises, with a relatively rigid corporate structure. The success in Spanish business practice of that option, traditionally envisaged by legislative policy, evinces the sound judgement of lawmakers in 1953 and 1995, given the very few instances in which private autonomy has opted for a personalised approach within the rigid confines defined by mandatory rules and overarching principles.

This substantial unity between different forms of corporate enterprises is even more visible, if possible, in the approach adopted in the consolidated text, which has refrained from resorting to a possible division between “general” and “specific” part”. Instead, the text is structured on a subject-by-subject basis, generalising where appropriate, without prejudice to including provisions specifically applicable to a given type of corporation, when they really and actually exist, in each chapter or section, or even in each article. That notwithstanding, the reader will perceive that the need to observe the limits of the mandate raises questions around the reason for having different solutions for different corporate devices.

IV

Theoretically speaking, the distinction between joint stock companies and limited liability companies hinges on a twofold characteristic: while the former are naturally open organisations, limited liability companies are essentially closed; while the former are enterprises with a rigid system for defending share capital, an established asset retention value and, therefore, guarantees for the company's creditors, the latter sometimes replace those defence mechanisms (at times more formal than effective) with liability systems, whereby the governing legislation is more flexible. While forecasts about the future of share capital as a technique for protecting third party interests (an issue that can only be addressed properly within the supranational framework of the European Union) are not in order here, it is interesting to note that this conflict between open and closed enterprises is not absolute, because in actual fact, the by-laws of the vast majority of Spanish joint stock companies (with the obvious exception of listed companies) contain clauses limiting the free transferability of shares. The underlying legal model is out of step with reality, a circumstance that Spanish lawmakers have taken into account and that had to be taken into consideration when drafting the consolidated text. This situation has generated a de facto overlapping of corporate forms, for to meet the same needs (i.e., needs specific to closed companies), individuals can choose between two different corporate forms, designed with differing requisites and obligations, although the reason for that duality is not always clearly visible. Consequently, the question about what kind of relationship ought to exist in the future between the two main types of corporate enterprises remains unanswered, as does the question about whether the move from one to another must conform to the requirements established for conversion or whether it ought to be facilitated through more flexible and simpler techniques. The essential distinction would appear to lie in whether companies are listed or otherwise, rather than in the narrow consideration of corporate form. The key role that listed companies play on capital markets calls for public intervention in business activity, firstly to protect investors and secondly to ensure the stability, efficiency and sound operation of financial markets.

In this respect, the regulation of listed companies is systematised both in this consolidated text, which covers eminently corporate economic aspects, and in Securities Exchange Act 24/1988 of 28 July, which regulates the financial dimension of these types of companies, under the umbrella of the principle of transparency so as to ensure sound market operation and investor protection.

Be it said, and stressed, that the consolidated text was drafted as a clearly provisional solution, the aim being for it to be superseded in the short term, thereby constituting just one more rung on the ladder to the perfection of Law. There are two grounds for this assertion. On the one hand, it is safe to say that in the immediate future lawmakers will be forced to introduce significant reforms in this domain, revising some traditional legal solutions, expanding directors' fiduciary duties, formulating more detailed regulations for listed companies and creating substantive law for corporate groups, which to date has been confined to the system of consolidated accounts and a number of episodic rules scattered throughout the articles of the act. On the other, the general goal is for the whole body of law on companies, including the law applicable to partnerships, to form a single body of law, doing away with the persistent legislative plurality that this consolidated text has managed to reduce but not eliminate. In this respect, it will be up to the Government to assess the work performed by the General Codification Committee in connection with the formulation of a Company Code, or even a new Commercial Code geared to meeting the requirements of market unity, and decide when and how such an ambitious reform is conducted.

By virtue whereof, acting on the proposal of the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Economy and Finance, in accordance with the State Council and further to deliberation by the Council of Ministers at its 2 July 2010 meeting, I hereby order:

Article 92. Shares as transferable securities

1. Shares may be represented by certificates of title or book entries. In both instances they shall be regarded to be transferable securities.

2. Stakes in limited liability companies may not be represented by certificates or book entries, nor be called shares, and under no circumstances shall be regarded to be securities.

CHAPTER II
PARTNERS' AND SHAREHOLDERS' RIGHTS

Section One. Partners' and shareholders' rights

Article 93. Partners' and shareholders' rights

Pursuant to the terms of this act, subject to the exceptions provided for hereunder, partners or shareholders shall be entitled to the following rights:

- a) To take part in the distribution of company earnings and in the equity resulting from liquidation.
- b) To acquire new stakes or subscribe new shares or convertible bonds under preferred conditions.
- c) To attend and vote at general meetings and challenge company agreements.
- d) To be duly informed.

Article 94. Diversity of rights

1. The rights attributed to partners or shareholders by stakes and shares shall be the same, subject to the exceptions provided for in the act.

Stakes and shares may afford different rights to their holders. Shares associated with the same rights form part of the same class. When a class is divided into several series, all shares in any given series shall have the same par value.

2. The creation of stakes and issue of shares attributing privileges over ordinary stakes and shares shall be subject to the procedures laid down to amend the by-laws.

Article 95. Privilege in the distribution of company earnings

1. When the privilege consists of a preference dividend, the profit for the financial year in question may not be distributed among other stakes or shares until the preference dividend for such year has been paid.

2. Unless otherwise indicated in the by-laws, the company shall be bound to approve the distribution of such dividend whenever distributable earnings are forthcoming.

3. The by-laws shall establish the consequences of failure to pay preference dividends in whole or in part, determine whether unpaid dividends are cumulative, and define the rights of the holders of such stakes or shares vis-à-vis the dividends payable to other stake or shareholders.

Article 96. Prohibitions in matters of privilege

1. The creation of stakes or the issue of shares entitled to collect interest shall not be valid, irrespective of the manner in which it is determined.

2. The issue of shares that may either directly or indirectly alter the proportionality between par value and voting or pre-emptive rights shall not be allowed.

3. The creation of stakes that either directly or indirectly alter the proportionality between par value and voting or pre-emptive rights shall not be allowed.

Article 97. Equal treatment

All partners or shareholders whose relationship with the company are identical shall be treated equally thereby.

Section Two. Non-voting stakes and shares

Article 98. Creation or issue

Limited liability companies may create non-voting stakes up to a par value of less than half of the capital and joint stock companies may issue non-voting shares up to a par value of under half of the paid up share capital.

Article 99. Preference dividend

1. Holders of non-voting stakes or shares shall be entitled to receive the minimum yearly dividend, whether fixed or variable, established in the by-laws. Once the minimum dividend has been approved, the holders of non-voting stakes or shares shall be entitled to the same dividend as paid for ordinary stakes or shares.

2. Where distributable profits are earned, the company shall be bound to approve the distribution of the abovementioned minimum dividend.

3. Where distributable profits are not earned or are insufficient for distribution, the portion of the unpaid minimum dividend must be paid within the following five financial years. Until such minimum dividend is paid up, the non-voting stocks and shares shall be entitled to this right under the same terms and conditions as ordinary shares and maintain their financial privileges.

Article 100. Privilege in the event of capital reduction to reflect losses

1. Non-voting stakes or shares shall be unaffected by capital reductions to reflect losses, irrespective of the terms thereof, unless the reduction exceeds the par value of the remaining stakes or shares. If, as a result of the reduction, the par value of the non-voting stakes or shares exceeds half of the capital in limited liability companies or of the paid up shares in joint stock companies, such proportion must be re-established within no more than two years.

Otherwise, the company shall be liquidated.

2. If all ordinary stakes or shares are redeemed as a result of a capital reduction, non-voting stocks or shares shall be entitled to such right until the legally established proportion between non-voting and ordinary stakes or shares is re-established.

Article 101. Liquidation privileges

In the event of company liquidation, non-voting stakes shall entitle their holders to reimbursement of the value thereof prior to distribution of any amount to the remaining stakeholders. In joint stock companies the scope of this privilege is the amount paid up in non-voting shares.

Article 102. Other rights

1. Non-voting stakes and shares shall entitle their holders to the other rights of ordinary shares, except as provided in previous articles.

2. Non-voting shares may not be grouped together for the purposes of appointment of members of the Board of Directors by proportional representation. The par value of such shares shall not be taken into account for the intents and purposes of the exercise of that right by the remaining shareholders.

3. Non-voting stakes shall be subject to the provisions in the by-laws and additional legislation on transfer and pre-emptive rights.

b) The transfer shall be subject to company authorisation, granted under a decision of the annual general meeting adopted by ordinary majority vote as established by law, provided the item is included on the agenda.

c) The company may only withhold its consent if it serves a notarised notice upon the transferor, specifying the identity of one or several partners or third parties interested in acquiring all the stakes for sale. No notice need be served upon the transferor if he/she attended the annual general meeting where such arrangements were approved. Partners attending the general meeting shall have purchase priority. If several attendees express an interest in the stakes in question, they shall be distributed among them all in proportion to their existing stakes in the company capital.

If one or several partners or third party purchasers of all the shares cannot be identified, the general meeting may decide that the company itself should acquire the shares that are not acquired by any partner or third party accepted by the meeting, pursuant to the provisions of Article 140.

If several partners undertake subrogation, the stakes shall be distributed in proportion to the holding of each in company capital.

2. The stocks or shares of any partner affected by any conflict of interest referred to in the above section shall be deducted from the capital for the purposes of calculating the majority vote required in each case.

3. In the event of any conflict of interest not referred to in section 1, partners shall not be deprived of their right to vote. However, in the event that the vote of the partner or partners with a conflict of interest would have been decisive with regards to the adoption of the agreement, in the event of a dispute, the burden of proof of conformity that the agreement is in the corporate interest shall lie with the company or, if relevant, the partner or partners affected by said conflict of interest. Any partner or partners in dispute must verify the conflict of interest. Excluded from this rule are any agreements relating to allocating, ceasing, revoking or invoking management responsibilities or similar, when the conflict of interest specifically applies to the position held by the partner within the company.

²⁸ Amended by single art. 3 of Law 31/2014 of 3 December.

Damage to corporate interest is also caused when the agreement, without causing damage to corporate assets, is imposed in an abusive manner by the majority. An agreement is understood to have been imposed in an abusive manner when, rather than responding reasonably to a corporate need, the majority adopts the agreement in their own interests and to the unjustifiable detriment of the other partners.

2. Corporate agreements that have been withdrawn or superseded by another agreement adopted before the challenge may not be challenged. If the withdrawal or substitution takes place after the challenge, the judge shall impose a termination order on the proceedings for lack of purpose.

This section is understood without prejudice to the right to challenge for the elimination of any effects or repair of damage that may have been caused by the agreement while it was in force.

3. The following reasons shall not be sufficient to challenge any agreement:

a) The infringement of any procedural requirements established by the law, by-laws or general meeting regulations to call or establish the body, or adopt an agreement, unless it refers to an infringement relating to the form and place of the call, the basic regulations of the establishment of the body, or the majorities needed for the adoption of agreements, in the same way as other reasons of a relevant nature.

b) Inaccurate or insufficient information supplied by the company in response to exercising the right to prior information from the general meeting, unless the incorrect or missing information would have been essential for the reasonable exercise of the shareholder or partner's right to vote or any of their other participatory rights.

c) Non-authorized persons participating in the meeting, unless said participation may have been a determining factor in constituting the organisation.

d) The invalidity of one or various votes, or the calculation error of any issued, unless the invalid vote or calculation error may have been a determining factor in the achievement of the necessary majority.

Once the claim has been made, the question of the essential or decisive nature of the challenge mentioned in this section shall be established as an incidental matter for prior admission.

Article 205. Expiration of action for challenge.³⁶

1. Action to challenge corporate decisions must be lodged within one year, unless the subject of the action is any agreement that by its circumstances, purpose or content runs contrary to public order, in which case the action shall not have a validity period, nor shall it expire.

2. The validity period shall be calculated from the date of the agreement adoption if it was adopted in a members' general meeting or board of directors' meeting and from the date of receipt of copy of the act if the agreement was adopted in writing. If the agreement was in writing, the validity period shall be calculated from the date of enforceability of the entry.

Article 206. Legal capacity to challenge.³⁷

1. Any director, any third party that accredits a legitimate interest and any partner that may have done the same before the agreement adoption is capacitated to challenge corporate agreements, assuming that they represent, either individually or jointly, at least one percent of the share capital.

The by-laws may reduce the percentages of share capital indicated and in all cases, partners who do not reach said percentages shall have the right to redress the damage that has been caused to them by the challengeable agreement.

2. Any partner, even if they acquired this position after the agreement, board director or third party shall be capacitated to challenge agreements that are contrary to public order.

3. Actions for challenge shall be brought against the company. When the claimant holds exclusive powers to represent the company and the general meeting has no other designee, the judge hearing the challenge shall appoint a representative from among the partners who voted in favour of the challenged agreement.

4. Partners who voted in favour of the challenged agreement may intervene in the proceedings to defend its validity, at their own expense.

5. Any person who, having had the opportunity to lodge a claim at the opportune moment, did not do so, may not allege defects during the agreement adoption process.

³⁶ Amended by single art. 8 of Law 31/2014 of 3 December.

³⁷ Amended by single art. 9 of Law 31/2014 of 3 December.

Article 207. Challenge procedure

Article 208. Ruling in favour of the challenger

1. Final rulings declaring a decision subject to registration to be null and void shall themselves be registered in the Mercantile Registry and published in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry.

- a) Not exercise their powers for any end purpose other than that for which they were granted.

In limited liability companies, the general meeting must also grant authorisation when it refers to the provision of any form of financial assistance, including guarantees from the company in the director's favour or when it establishes a work or services relationship with the company.

In all other cases, the directing body may authorise aforementioned release, assuming that the members who grant it are independent from the director to whom it is being granted. Furthermore, it is necessary to ensure that the authorised operation shall not affect corporate assets and, if relevant, that it is conducted within market conditions and with full transparency.

3. The obligation not to compete with the company may only be subject to exemption in the event that no damages are expected to be suffered by the company or that the damages expected to be suffered shall be compensated by the benefits forecast to be gained by obtaining said exemption. The exemption shall be granted through the explicit separate agreement of the general meeting.

⁴⁷ Amended by single art. 18 of Law 31/2014 of 3 December.

⁵⁰ Amended by single art. 21 of Law 31/2014 of 3 December.

Any amendment that has a significant level of clearly asymmetrical economic or political impact on other shares or shareholders, shall be deemed discriminatory.

3. The decision by the shareholders affected shall be subject to approval by the majority required in this act for amending the by-laws, either at a special meeting or by a separate vote at the general meeting, and shall be explicitly included in the notice of that meeting.

4. The provisions of this act for the general meeting shall apply to special meetings.

Article 294. Individual protection of general partners in a limited partnerships

When a proposal to amend the by-laws of a limited partnership refers to the appointment of directors, a change in the arrangements for company administration or corporate purpose, or extension of the life of the company beyond the term established in the by-laws, the decision must be adopted by the general meeting in compliance with the requirements laid down in this act, and its validity shall be contingent upon the consent of all the general partners.

CAPITAL INCREASES

Section One. Types of increase

Article 295. Types of increase

1. Company capital may be increased by either creating new stakes or issuing new shares or by increasing the par value of the existing stakes or shares.

2. In both cases the capital increase may be booked against new cash or non-cash contributions to the company equity, including credits held against the company, or charged to profits or reserves shown on the last approved balance sheet.

Section Two. Decision to increase capital

Article 296. Decision on capital increase

1. Decisions to increase company capital must be adopted by the general meeting and shall be subject to approval by the majority required in this act for amending the by-laws.
2. Adoption of decisions to increase capital by raising the par value of stakes or shares shall be contingent upon the consent of all partners or shareholders, unless the increase is fully charged to profits or reserves shown on the last approved balance sheet.
3. In joint stock companies, at least one-fourth of the value of all company shares must be paid up after the capital increase.

Article 297. Power vested in directors

1. In joint stock companies, the general meeting may adopt decisions to vest the directors with the powers listed below, which shall be subject to approval by the majority required in this act for amending the by-laws:
 - a) The power to set the date on which the decision to increase capital by the sum agreed will be implemented and to establish whatsoever terms and conditions were not determined by the meeting; the term in which this power must be exercised may not exceed one year, except as regards convertible bonds.
 - b) The power to increase company capital in one or several stages up to the sum specified, when and for the amounts deemed appropriate, without consulting the general meeting; such increases may under no circumstance involve over half the company capital at the time the authorisation is forthcoming and must be implemented in the form of cash contributions within no more than five years of the meeting's decision.

2. By virtue of the foregoing, the directors are vested with the power to redraft the article of the by-laws on share capital after the increase is adopted and implemented.

Article 298. Increases with premiums

1. In capital increases, stakes may be created and shares issued with a premium.

2. The premium must be fully paid up when the new stakes are taken or new shares are subscribed.

Article 299. Increases charged to cash contributions

1. In joint stock companies, except insurance companies, capital increases booked against new cash contributions to the company equity may not be made until all previously issued shares are fully paid up.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraph, if the amount outstanding does not exceed three per cent of the share capital, the increase may be effected.

Article 300. Increases charged to non-cash contributions

1. Where increases consist of non-cash contributions, along with the notice of the meeting, partners or shareholders must be provided with a directors' report containing a detailed description of the planned contributions, their valuation, the persons expected to make them, the number and par value of the stakes or shares to be created or issued, the amount of the capital increase and the security established to render the increase effective, in keeping with the nature of the assets comprising such contribution.

2. The notice of the general meeting shall inform all partners or shareholders of their right to examine the report at the registered office, as well as to request cost-free copies of such document to be received in hand or forwarded to their address.

Article 301. Increases to offset loans

1. When limited liability companies increase their capital by offsetting loans, such loans must be fully liquid and receivable. When joint stock companies increase their capital by offsetting loans, at least twenty-five per cent thereof must be liquid, mature and receivable, and none of the remaining loans may mature in over five years.

2. At the same time as the general meeting is convened, the partners or shareholders shall be given access to a report at the registered office, prepared by the company's governing body, on the nature and characteristics of the loans to be offset, the identity of contributors, the number of stakes or shares to be created or issued and the amount of the increase, explicitly confirming the concurrence between the data on the loans and company accounts.

3. In joint stock companies, at the same time as the general meeting is convened, shareholders shall have access, at the registered office, to a certificate issued by the auditor confirming that his/her verification of the company accounts found the information provided by the directors on the loans in question to be accurate. If the company has no auditor, the certificate shall be issued by an auditor appointed by the Mercantile Registry at the behest of the directors.

4. The notice convening the general meeting must inform all partners or shareholders of their right to examine the directors' report and, in the case of joint stock companies, the auditor's certificate, at the registered office, as well as to request cost-free copies of such documents to be received in hand or forwarded to their address.

5. The directors' and, in joint stock companies, the auditor's reports, shall be attached to the public instrument on the capital increase.

Article 302. Increases by converting bonds

When the capital is increased by converting bonds into shares, the provisions of the bond issue agreement shall apply.

Article 303. Increases charged to reserves

1. When capital increases are charged to reserves, the reserves that may be earmarked for this purpose include unrestricted reserves and reserves constituted with new partner or shareholder stake or share premiums. In limited liability companies, the legal reserve in full and in joint stock companies, the sum in the reserve in excess of ten per cent of the share capital after the increase, may also be used for this purpose.

2. The operation shall be based on a balance sheet approved by the general meeting as of a date no more than six months prior to the decision to increase capital, verified by the company's auditor or by an auditor appointed by the Mercantile Registry at the behest of the directors, in companies not obliged to audit their accounts.

Section Three. Implementation of decision to increase capital

Article 304. Pre-emptive right

1. In capital increases involving the issue of new ordinary or preference stakes or shares, posted against cash contributions, partners or shareholders shall be entitled to take or subscribe a number of stakes or shares in proportion to the par value of their holdings prior to the increase.
2. Pre-emptive rights shall not be in order when the capital increase is the result of the takeover of another company or of all or part of the equity divested by another company or the conversion of bonds into shares.

Article 305. Term for the exercise of the pre-emptive right

1. In limited liability companies, pre-emptive rights shall be exercised within the term specified in the respective decision. In joint stock companies, pre-emptive rights shall be exercised within the term established by the directors.
2. The term for the exercise of such rights may not be less than one month counting from the date of publication of the announcement of the offering for new stakes or shares in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry.
3. When all limited liability company stakes or all joint stock company shares are registered, in lieu of publishing an announcement, the governing body may send a written notice to all partners or shareholders and, as appropriate, usufructuaries entered in the stakeholders' ledger or the ledger of registered shares. The term for taking new stakes or subscribing new shares shall begin on the date such notice is sent.

Article 306. Transfer of pre-emptive rights

1. In limited liability companies, the pre-emptive right to take new stakes may be the object of voluntary inter vivos transfer to parties who, in accordance with this act or the company by-laws, may freely acquire the stakes. The bylaws may likewise allow the transfer of this right to other parties, subjecting such transfer to the conditions established for the inter vivos transfer of stakes, with the exception, as appropriate, of the term established therefor, which may be modified.

2. In joint stock companies, the transfer of pre-emptive rights shall be subject to the same conditions as transfer of the shares to which they refer.

Where capital increases are charged to reserves, the aforementioned rule shall be applicable to the right to cost-free allocation of new shares.

Article 307. Pre-emptive right: second round

1. In limited liability companies, unless otherwise stipulated in the by-laws, stakes not taken up during the term for the exercise of the pre-emptive right shall be offered by the governing body to the partners who exercised such right, for take-up and settlement in no more than fifteen days of the first round deadline. If several partners are interested in the offer, the stakes shall be allocated in proportion to each partner's existing stake in the company.

2. For fifteen days after the end of the above period, any stakes not taken up may be awarded by the governing body to third parties.

Article 308. Exclusion of the pre-emptive right⁷³

1. If deemed to be in the company's best interests, the general meeting, when approving the capital increase, may decide to wholly or partially waive partners' or shareholders' pre-emptive subscription right.

2. For the agreement regarding the exclusion of pre-emptive rights to be valid, the following is needed:

a) Administrators shall draft a report specifying the value of stocks or shares in the company and provide a detailed justification of the proposal and compensation to be provided for the new stocks or new shares; it shall indicate the individuals receiving the stocks and shares and, for public limited companies, an independent expert, other than the company's auditor, nominated to this end by the Companies Register, shall draft another report, for which he/she is responsible, on the fair value of the company's shares, the theoretical value of the pre-emptive right being excluded or limited and on the reasonableness of data contained in the administrators' report.

⁷³ Sections 2.a) and 2.c) amended by final provision 14.14 of Law 22/2015 of 20 July

b) The notice of the meeting includes the proposal to waive the pre-emptive right, the manner in which new stakes are to be created or new shares issued and information on partners' or shareholders' right to examine the report or reports referred to in the preceding paragraph at the registered office, as well as to request cost-free copies of such documents at the registered office or their own address.

c) Assurance that the nominal value of the new stocks and new shares, plus, where applicable, the premium amount, corresponds to the real value attributed to the stocks in the administrators' report for limited liability companies or the value contained in the independent expert's report for public limited companies.

Article 309. Share subscription form

1. In joint stock companies, when shares are publicly offered for subscription, the offer shall be subject to the requirements laid down by the securities market regulations and shares shall be subscribed under cover of a document entitled 'share subscription form' that shall be issued in duplicate and contain at least the following data:

a) Company name and address, along with the data identifying its entry in the mercantile registry.

b) Subscriber name and surname or company name, and nationality and address.

c) Number of shares subscribed, the par value and series, where more than one is offered, and the type of issue.

d) The amount paid by the subscriber specifying, as appropriate, the portion of the par value already paid up and the sum corresponding to the issue premium.

e) The identity of the financial institution where the subscription will materialise and payment will be made of the sums shown on the form.

f) The date as of which the subscriber may claim the refund of any monies paid in the event of failure to register the formalisation of the capital increase in the mercantile registry.

g) The date and the subscriber's or his/her representative's signature, and the signature of the person receiving payment.

2. All subscribers shall be entitled to receive a signed copy of the subscription form.

Article 310. Incomplete take-up in limited liability companies

1. When limited liability company capital increases are not fully paid up within the established deadline, the company capital shall be increased by the amount paid up, unless according to the terms of the decision the increase is to be declared null and void if not completely taken up.

2. If the capital increase is rendered null and void, the governing body shall refund the contributions made within one month of the payment deadline. In the event of cash contributions, the refunds may be made by deposit of the respective amounts in an account in the name of the contributors at a financial institution in the place where the registered office is located. The parties concerned shall be notified in writing of the date of payment and the financial institution where the sums are deposited.

Article 311. Incomplete take-up in joint stock companies

1. When joint stock company capital increases are not fully paid up within the payment deadline, the capital shall only be increased by the amount of the payments made, if the conditions of the issue explicitly envisage such possibility.

2. If the capital increase is rendered null and void, the governing body shall publish an announcement to this effect in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry and, within one month of the subscription deadline, shall refund all contributions made. In the event of cash contributions, the refunds must be paid to the contributors directly or by deposit of the respective amounts in their name at the Bank of Spain or the Official Deposit Fund.

Article 312. Payment in capital increases

Parties taking new stakes or subscribing new shares shall be bound to make payment upon subscription.

Section Four. Registration of capital increases

Article 313. Directors' powers

After the decision to increase capital is implemented, the directors must redraft the by-laws to reflect the new sum. They shall be understood to be empowered to do so by virtue of the aforementioned decision.

Article 314. Formalisation of capital increases

Documents formalising capital increases must specify the assets or rights contributed and, in the event of limited liability companies and unlisted joint stock companies, whether the increase involves the creation of new stakes or the issue of new shares, the identity of the persons to whom they are allocated, the numbers of the stakes or shares, and the governing body's confirmation that stake or share ownership has been recorded in the stakeholders' ledger or that registered share ownership has been entered in the ledger of registered shares.

Article 315. Registration of capital increases

1. The decision to increase capital and its implementation must be entered simultaneously in the Mercantile Registry.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraph, the decision to increase joint stock company capital may be entered in the Mercantile Registry prior to its formalisation when the two conditions listed below are present.

- a) The capital increase agreement explicitly envisages subscription of less than the full offering.
- b) The issue of new shares is authorised or verified by the National Securities Market Commission.

Article 316. Right to refund

1. If the documents substantiating implementation of the capital increase are not submitted for entry in the Mercantile Registry within six months of the beginning of the period for exercising pre-emptive rights, all stakeholders or share subscribers may request cancellation of their obligation to make contributions and demand the refund of any made.

2. If the failure to present such documents for registration is attributable to the company, interest at the legal rate may also be claimed.

CHAPTER III
CAPITAL REDUCTIONS

Section One. Types of reduction

Article 317. Types of reduction

1. Capital reductions may seek to re-establish the balance between the company's capital and its equity, which may have declined as a result of losses, the creation or provisioning of legal or voluntary reserves or the refund of contributions. In joint stock companies, capital reductions may also aim to cancel the amounts due on outstanding contributions.

2. Reductions may be effected by lowering the par value of stakes or shares, or redeeming or grouping these equities.

Article 318. Decision to reduce share capital

1. Decisions to reduce share capital must be adopted by the general meeting and shall be subject to approval by the majority laid down for amending the by-laws.

2. The general meeting's decision shall specify at least the amount of the reduction, its purpose, how it shall be implemented and the term for its implementation. It shall also indicate the amount to be paid, if any, to partners or shareholders.

Article 319. Public notice of the decision to reduce capital

The decision to reduce joint stock company capital must be published in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry and a daily newspaper widely circulated in the province where the company has its registered office.

Section Two. Reduction to reflect losses

Article 320. Principle of equal treatment

When a reduction seeks to re-establish the balance between a company's capital and its equity, adversely impacted by losses, it must affect all stakes or shares in equal proportion to their par value, while respecting any privileges in this regard that may have been granted to certain stakes or shares by law or the by-laws.

Article 321. Prohibitions

Capital reductions resulting from losses may not under any circumstance entail refunds to partners or shareholders or, in the case of joint stock companies, the cancellation of sums owed on outstanding contributions.

Article 322. Condition for non-admissibility of capital reductions

1. Limited liability companies may not reduce their capital to reflect losses when they have any manner of reserves.

2. Joint stock companies may not reduce their capital to reflect losses whilst the company has any manner of voluntary reserves or if the legal reserve, after the reduction, is greater than ten per cent of the capital.

Article 323. Balance sheet

1. The balance sheet showing the losses to be reflected in the capital reduction shall be formulated for a date no more than six months prior to the respective decision, be verified by the company's auditor and approved by the general meeting. When the company's financial statements are not subject to mandatory audit, the auditor shall be appointed by the directors.

2. The balance sheet and audit report must be attached to the public document formalising the decision to reduce capital.

Article 324. Public notice of the decision to reduce capital

The general meeting's decision to reduce capital as a reflection of losses and the public announcement thereof must explicitly state the purpose of such reduction.

Article 325. Application of surplus

In joint stock companies, any surplus in assets over liabilities resulting from the capital reduction to reflect losses must be used to provision the legal reserve, which may not as a result exceed one-tenth of the reduced share capital.

Article 326. Condition for distribution of dividends

Companies that have reduced their capital may not distribute dividends until their legal reserve amounts to ten per cent of their capital.

Article 327. Mandatory reduction

Joint stock companies shall be bound to reduce their capital when their losses lower their equity to under two-thirds of their capital and no recovery in equity is forthcoming for one full financial year.

Section Three. Reduction to provision the legal reserve

Article 328. Reduction to provision the legal reserve

The provisions of Articles 322 to 326 shall apply to the constitution of or additions to the legal reserve.

Section Four. Reduction to refund contributions

Article 329. Decision to reduce capital. Pre-requisites

When not all stakes or shares are equally impacted by a decision to reduce capital with a view to refunding contributions, in limited liability companies the individual consent of the stakeholders affected, and in joint stock companies the agreement of a majority of the shareholders affected, reached in the manner defined in Article 293, shall be requisite to such decision.

Article 330. Pro rata rule

Partners' contributions must be refunded in proportion to the amount paid for the stakes or shares, unless other arrangements are unanimously approved.

Section Five. Creditor protection

Sub-section 1. Protection for limited liability company creditors

Article 331. Joint and several liability of limited liability company partners

1. Partners whose contributions have been refunded in full or in part shall be held jointly and severally liable to one another and the company for the payment of company debt acquired prior to the date on which the reduction became effective in respect of third parties.

2. The liability of each partner shall be limited to the amount refunded thereto.

3. Partner liability shall lapse five years after the date when the reduction became effective in respect of third parties.

4. The Mercantile Registry entry recording the implementation of the decision to reduce capital shall specify the identity of the persons whose contributions were refunded in full or in part or, as appropriate, the governing body's statement to the effect that the reserve referred to below has been created.

Article 332. Exception to joint and several liability

1. If the decision to reduce capital to refund all or part of the value of the contributions is attendant upon the use of profits or unrestricted reserves to provision a reserve for an amount equal to the sums refunded, partner joint and several liability shall not be in order.

2. Such reserve shall remain restricted for a period of five years from publication of the capital reduction in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry, unless all company debt acquired before the date on which the reduction became effective in respect of third parties is repaid prior thereto.

Article 333. Inclusion in the by-laws of creditors' right to challenge reductions

1. In limited liability companies, the by-laws may provide that the implementation of decisions to reduce capital to refund partners' contributions shall be subject to a three-month delay counting from the date of the notice served on creditors.

2. Such notice shall be served upon each creditor individually. If one or more creditors' address is unknown, announcements shall be published in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry and in a daily newspaper widely circulated in the province where the company is located.

3. During said delay, ordinary creditors may challenge the implementation of the decision to reduce capital if their receivables are not honoured or if the company fails to provide security.

4. Refunds paid prior to end of the three-month period or despite challenges lodged by any creditor in due time and manner shall be null and void.

5. Partners' contributions must be refunded in proportion to the stakes held, unless other arrangements are unanimously approved.

Sub-section 2. Protection for joint stock company creditors

Article 334. Joint stock company creditors' right to challenge reduction

1. Joint stock company creditors whose receivables from the company are dated prior to the last announcement of the decision to reduce capital and mature on a date subsequent thereto shall be entitled to challenge the reduction until such time as the debt is secured.

2. Creditors whose receivables are sufficiently secured shall not be so entitled.

Article 335. Exception to the right to challenge reductions

Creditors may not challenge capital reductions when any of the following ensue:

- a) When the sole aim of the capital reduction is to re-establish the balance between the company's capital and its equity, reduced as a result of losses.
- b) When the reduction aims to create or provision the legal reserve.
- c) When the reduction is charged to unrestricted profits or reserves by redeeming shares acquired free of charge by the company. In this case, the amount of the par value of the shares redeemed or of the reduction in their par value must be posted to a reserve whose drawdown shall be subject to the same requirements as set forth for reducing share capital.

Article 336. Term for exercising the right to challenge capital reductions

The right to challenge capital reductions must be exercised within one month of the date of the last announcement of the respective decision.

Article 337. Consequences of challenge

If the right to challenge capital reductions is exercised, the share capital may not be reduced until the company secures its debt to the satisfaction of the creditor or notifies such creditor of the creation of a joint and several performance bond at a financial institution with the capacity to secure the sum of the debt held by the creditor through the date when entitlement to claim settlement of such debt lapses.

Section Six. Reduction through acquisition of own stakes or shares for redemption

Article 338. Requirements

1. When capital is reduced by purchase of the company's own stakes or shares for subsequent redemption, the buyback offer shall be made to all partners or shareholders.
2. If the decision to reduce capital affects only one class of shares, it shall be contingent upon the separate consent of the majority of the shares in the class affected, adopted in the manner defined in Article 293.

Article 339. Offer to acquire stakes or shares

1. In limited liability companies, the offer shall be sent to all partners by registered post with acknowledgement of receipt.
2. In joint stock companies, the buyback proposal must be published for at least one month in the Official Journal of the Mercantile Registry and in a daily newspaper widely circulated in the province where the company has its registered office. Such announcement shall include all the information reasonably required by shareholders wishing to sell their shares and, as appropriate, shall specify the outcome if the number of shares offered fails to reach the amount established in the decision.

When all shares are registered, the by-laws may provide for notifying shareholders of the offer by registered post with acknowledgement of receipt in lieu of publishing the respective announcement.

Article 340. Acceptance

1. The period for accepting the offer shall be counted from the date on which the notification was sent.
2. If more stakes or shares are offered for sale than established by the company for repurchase, the number offered by each partner or shareholder shall be reduced in proportion to their respective holdings.
3. Unless otherwise provided in the decision of the general meeting or buyback proposal, when fewer stakes or shares are offered for sale than established, the capital shall be understood to be reduced by the amount of holdings repurchased.

Article 341. Founders' bonds

1. When capital is reduced to redeem shares, founders' bonds may be allocated to the holders of redeemed shares, in which case the decision to reduce capital shall specify the rights attached to such bonds.

2. Founders' bonds shall not carry voting rights.

Article 342. Mandatory redemption

Stakes acquired by the company must be redeemed within three years of the date of the repurchase offer. Shares acquired by the company must be redeemed within one month of the buyback offer deadline.

CHAPTER IV

SIMULTANEOUS CAPITAL REDUCTION AND INCREASE

Article 343. Simultaneous capital reduction and increase

1. Decisions to reduce the share capital to zero or to below the legal minimum may only be adopted when a simultaneous decision is adopted to convert the company or increase its capital to an amount equal or above such minimum.

2. In any event, all partners' or shareholders' pre-emptive rights to take stakes or subscribe shares must be honoured.

Article 344. Conditioned effectiveness of decision to reduce capital

In the event of simultaneous capital reductions and increases, the effectiveness of the decision on capital reduction shall be subject, as appropriate, to implementation of the decision on capital increase.

Article 345. Simultaneous registration

The decision to reduce capital may not be entered in the Mercantile Registry unless submitted for registration simultaneously with the decision to convert the company or the decision and implementation thereof to increase its capital.

2. Exit rights shall be exercised in writing within one month of publication of the decision or receipt of the notification.

Article 348 bis. *Right of exit due to failure to distribute dividends*⁷⁵

1. After the fifth year from the date of the company's registration on the Companies Register, any partner who voted in favour of distributing the corporate dividends shall have the right to exit, in the event that the general meeting does not agree to distribute at least one third of the legally distributable profits arising from the company's main business activities during the previous financial year.

2. The deadline for exercising exit rights shall be one month from the date of the shareholders' ordinary general meeting.

3. The provisions of this article shall not be applicable to listed companies.

Article 349. Registration of the decision

Article 351. Causes for exclusion of partners or shareholders in the by-laws⁷⁶

2. With the exception of managing partners or shareholders ordered by the court to indemnify the company, the exclusion of a partner or shareholder with a holding greater than or equal to twenty-five per cent of the capital who disagrees with the decision adopted by the general meeting shall be subject not only to such decision, but also to an unappealable court ruling.

2. Non-executive directors are all other directors in the company, whether proprietary, independent or other external directors.

3. Proprietary directors are those who possess a shareholding equal to or exceeding the quantity legally considered significant, or who have been appointed due to their position as shareholder, although their shareholding does not reach said required quantity, as well as those who represent the aforementioned shareholders.

4. Independent directors are those who, appointed in recognition of their personal and professional status, may perform their duties without appearing biased due to relationships with the company or its group, its significant shareholders or its management team.
